MARK STILLE'S SIMULATION OF THE DOOMED
ATTEMPT TO RELIEVE STALINGRAD

OPERATION WINTER STORM

The fate of 250,000 Germans hinged on pitting a scratch Panzer Corps against two Soviet Armies...

TOPOGRAPHY, TERRAIN AND CLIMATE

CAVALRY

There were sabers in the snows, on both sides.
See how they fared.

PROPAGANDA

The War of Words between Berlin and Moscow as the circle closed.

LEADERSHIP

Competent strategy is more important than dazzling
tactical panache.

OPERATIONAL PLANNING

Look over the generals'
shoulders to see their plans.

THE RED ARMY

Stalin's bludgeon or an ever smarter, professionally
wielded weapon?

THE GERMAN ARMY

Was the blade dull or still capable of a riposte?

NIGHT PROWLERS

Hunting by moonlight was a tricky business.

SATURNIAN DAYS ON THE DON

The Italians' part in the Stalingrad drama.

STALINGRAD AIRLIFT

Could Goring have pulled off history's biggest airlift?

PAGE 32 -- J. D. WEBSTER

ALLIED RELATIONS

Could Hitler count on his own Axis of Evil?

ARTILLERY

Once the queen of the battlefield, she still had an impact.

SUPPLY AND LOGISTICS

They fought on a shoestring.
See how and when it frayed.

DISEASE

Starvation wasn't the only
unseen enemy stalking
both sides.

FALLEN HARPIES

The Soviet female fighter pilots and their role in the skies over Stalingrad.

LUCK, CHANCE AND DECISIONS

The Germans rolled the dice
every step. Were they jinxed?

ARMOR

The super tanks were yet
to be seen, but both sides fought with what they had.

HISTORICAL APPRAISAL

Genius, stupidity and the achieving of war aims.

THE RED NAVY

Ships of all sorts battled along the Volga during the Stalingrad campaign.

INFANTRY

They fought, starved and froze. Here are the men and their weapons.
